THE LATEST IN SHOES!

Are you on the look out for something handsome and serviceable in shoe leather? If you are, you will look a long time before you find any thing that matches our new fall shoes. We are enjoying the best shoe trade of any store in the country, and we know just how we came to have it, and we know just how we are going to keep it, by selling "first class goods" at "second class prices." When you pay your good money you are entitled to a good shoe. The merchant who sells cheap shoddy shoes ought to have to wear them himself.
MCLEOD & DULIN.

WHEN THE COWS COME HOME.

When the cows come home o'er the silent lea,
And the leaves are a-rustling soft and free,
And a twilight blending the sun doth shed
On the earth below and the clouds o'er-head,
And the turkeys roost in a friendly tree—Then my thoughts run back to my childish glee
In the pastures green, and the "Goodnight" tea
That my mother made fairly turns my head—
When the cows come home!
Sweet thoughts of love are all naught to me When home comes in with its gentle plea Of mother and father, long since dead, And my heart to those fond scenes seem led At eve when the sun's last rays I see—
When the cows come home.

CURIOSITIES OF MUSIC.

The horse can distinguish between music notes. "There was a work-horse of my own," says Mr.
Stephens in his "Book of the Farm," "that even at his corn would desist eating and listen attentively, with pricked and moving ears and steady eyes the instant he heard the note low G sounded, and would continue to listen so long as it was sustained, and another that was similarly affected by a particularly high note." The recognition of the sound of the bugle by a trooper, and the excitement occasioned in the hunter when the pack give tongue, are familiar instances of the power of horses to discriminate between different sounds; they never mistake one call from another.

Recognizing the love of horses for music, a wealthy enthusiast in the latter part of the seventeenth century had regular concerts provided for the benefit of his stud.
Jacques Bonnet, when in Holland, in 1868, visited the stable, and saw there the raised orchestra, from which, once a week, a selection of favorite airs was played to cheer up the spirits of the listening animals.

On sheep and cattle, music, both vocal and instrumental, has a highly beneficial effect. There is a poetic saying among the Arabs that the song of the shepherd fat-tens the sheep more than the richest pasture of the plains, and the saying rests, no doubt, on a foundation of fact. Eastern shepherds ate in the habit of singing and piping to quicken the action of the flocks under their charge. A lamb which had a discriminating ear is mentioned by Mr. J. G. Wood. It delighted in brisk and lively tunes, such as are set for polkas and quadrilles, but abhorred all slow and solemn compositions. This frivolous lamb had the deepest detestation for the national anthem, and would set up such a continuous baabaa as soon as its ears were struck with the unwelcome sounds that the musician was fain to close the performance, being silenced by mirth, if not by pity.

When cows are sulky, milkmaids in the Highlands of Scotland often sing to them to restore them to good humor. In France the oxen that work in the fields are regularly sung to as an encouragement to exertion, and no peasant has the slightest doubt but that the animals listen to him with pleasure.

Deer are delighted with the sound of music. A traveler in England speaks of meeting a herd of stags upon the road, following a bagpipe and violin. When the music played they went forward; when it ceased they all stood still, and in this manner they were brought up out of Yorkshire to Hampton Court.

The cheering influence of music is seen in the case of camels. During their long and painful marches the conductors of caravans often comfort their animals by playing on instruments. The music has such an effect that however fatigated they may be by their heavy loads, the animals step out with renewed vigor.

Seals are very fond of music, and have been known to follow a boat for a long distance in which some one was playing. According to some authorities, the seal prefers the sound of a bagpipe to that of any other instrument.

Sir John Hawkins says that one evening a friend of his was playing himself in a house. He had not played a quarter of an hour when he saw several spiders descend from the ceiling, which came and arranged themselves about the table to hear him play, at which he was greatly surprised; but this did not interrupt him, being willing to see the end of such an occurrence.
They remained on the table till some one came to tell him that supper was ready, when, having ceased to play, he told me these insects mounted to their webs, to which he would suffer no injury to be done.
It was a diversion with which he often entertained himself out of curiosity.—The Leisure Hour.

FOR THE CZAR.

A Highland Costume for the Autocrat of the Russians.

An old Mull weaver has just executed what is for him a rather curious order, nothing less than a suit of homespun tweed for his imperial highness the czar of all the Russians. The cloth is of the usual kind—a homely looking tartan, in which the prevailing colors are lichen and indigo. It is scarcely to be presumed that the czar, tired of dazzling uniforms and gorgeous apparel, has determined to startle the court by appearing in a suit of Highland spun tartan. Such an action, says the Scottish Standard, might have been expected of the German emperor, but his brother of Russia is too practical to indulge in such caprices; and yet his order of the Highland suit shows that he is not above being swayed by the impulse of sentimentalism. He has given this peculiar order because his father, the late czar, had for nurse a Ross of Mull girl named Catherine McKinnon, who by some stroke of luck found her way into the imperial family of Russia, and so commended herself to her royal employers that recollections of her services remain in the family to this day. Thus it is that the czar has had ordered and obtained a suit of Mull-spun tweed, woven within a few miles of the now ruined cot where Catherine McKinnon spent her childhood. Had Catherine lived in an earlier age she might have been czarina and the mother, not the nurse, of emperors, for was not the great Catherine of as lowly an origin as this cotter girl from Mull?

BELGIANS AND SWISS.

A Singular Rivalry for Two of the Smallest European Countries.

There seems likely to be a race between "les brave Belges" and the Swiss to see which nation can afford to spend most money on fortifications, and the Belgian Government, having Gen. Brialmont to show them the way, are the favorites in the betting. When I was a schoolboy here a good many years ago, nobody wanted to invade any part of the Netherlands except as a tourist en route for the Rhine and Switzerland, and I remember what pretty uniforms King Leopold's officers wore, and I used to wonder how they could afford to purchase all the gold and silver trappings of their pay, which used to be, and I believe, is about half what English officers receive—and that isn't very much. In those days the Belgians talked considerably of their army, but never spoke of their forts, because they had none; but now all this is changed, for all topics of conversation have to give place to the last on dit as to what Gen. Brialmont is going to do on the Meuse and where the next line of forts are likely to be. It is a singular, and, I may add notable fact, that two of the smallest countries in Europe, whose neutrality is supposed to be guaranteed by treaties and guaranteed by the greater power, should be continually voting large sums for frontier defenses of a permanent nature, when neither of them have soldiers to man the works after they are finished.—Broad Arrow.

The fog might be pointed out as England's air apparent.

FAITH IN WITCHCRAFT.

Simple Minded People Who have Suffered Through Their Superstition.

Belief in witchcraft is still found among the people in many countries. The wife of a rich farmer in Styria, Austria, had been paralyzed for years, and the medical men gave her up as hopeless. The farmer lately applied to a soothsayer, who looked into the matter and pronounced the patient to be bewitched. She pointed out another farmer who had also been sick for years as the wizard, and prescribed that an old pair of pants of the man and a few drops of his blood must be placed over a dull fire and slowly burned. The patient must be held over this smouldering fire and thoroughly fumigated, after which she would recover. The pants were obtained and the old sick man one evening, when stepping into the doorway of his hut to get a breath of fresh air, was attacked and thrown down on his face to make his nose and mouth bleed.
The blood was carefully scraped up from the ground and the fumi-gation made, but, of course, without the promised effect of curing the woman. The old man was terribly shaken and died soon after, whether as a result of the outrage committed against him was not reported. At Viella, Spain, a farmer was sick. His son went to the only woman in the village that enjoyed the reputation of being a witch, and demanded of her to restore his father to health. When, a few days later, his father had not improved he went and shot both the so-called witch and her husband dead.

MATCHES AND PINS.

Millions of Them Made and Put in Use Every Day.

Matches and pins being among the most common things in daily use, it is seldom that any thought is bestowed upon them. Matches that are ignited by friction were first made in 1829, before which they were made to catch fire from a spark struck from flint or steel—a very inconvenient method. It is hard to say how many millions of matches are made in a day, but when the number of people that use them is reckoned, the total sum is appalling. Probably in the city of New York alone over twenty million matches are used every twenty four hours. But matches are such little things that nobody ever think of them. From an ordinary three-inch plank 186,000 matches may be made, yet even at that rate the lumber used in the match business attains
